

Abstract

WAP-enabled telephone handsets have been developed which allow the user to access remote servers. When using a search engine, a search term is prepared off-line and transmitted once the handset has established connection with the search engine server.

5